

GHANA

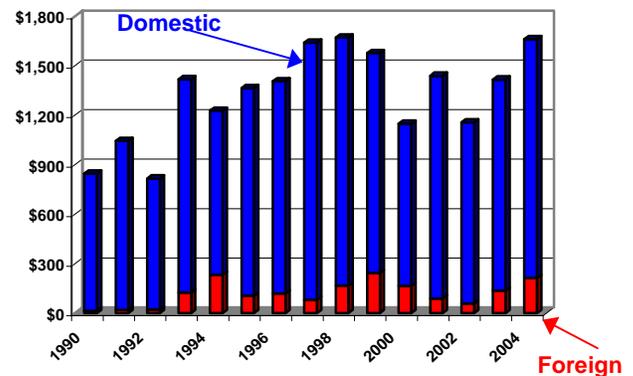

- * After years of erratic growth in the early 1980s, Ghana has since maintained a healthy GDP growth.
- * Ghana's growth in domestic investment in its economy has also attracted foreign investors.
- * While two-thirds of Ghana's exports remain Gold and Cocoa-based, the improved economic climate has also attracted a growing tourist export business over the past 15 years.
- * Ghana has invested in its people -- witness the doubling of expenditures on public education, and as a ratio to GDP equal to many developed countries.
- * According to Transparency International, Ghana is becoming one of the lesser corrupt countries in Africa.
- * The World Economic Forum rates Ghana as one of the ascending competitive nations in Africa.

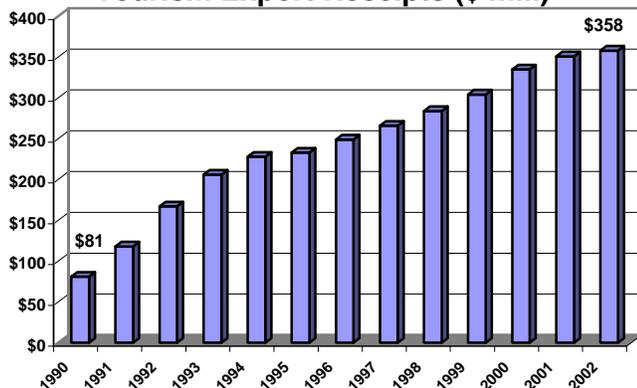

Real GDP Growth 1990-2004

Domestic and Foreign Investment ($ mil)

Tourism Export Receipts ($ mil.)

Public Education Expenditures (%GDP)

