

The Recovery Program at Work

Revitalizing the Economy

As companies such as Faber-Castell obtained raw materials, their production and exports increased. More Western European products began to appear in American and Canadian markets, including English china, Vespa scooters, Danish hams, French wines, Dutch cheeses, and sporty European cars. Dollars earned through those exports helped modernize factories. And increasing numbers of tourists brought dollars directly to the “Old World.”

English porcelain for export

English porcelain on display in a U.S. store