Counter-Terrorism Rewards Program

OVERVIEW

Rewards for Justice, the U.S. Department of State's counter-terrorism rewards program, is one of the U.S. Government's most valuable assets in the fight against international terrorism. Established by the 1984 Act to Combat International Terrorism, Public Law 98-533, Rewards for Justice has developed into a global, interagency effort led by the Department of State's Bureau of Diplomatic Security.

Through Rewards for Justice, the U.S. Secretary of State can offer and pay rewards for information that prevents or favorably resolves acts of international terrorism against U.S. persons or property domestically or abroad, leads to the arrest or prosecution of individuals responsible for such acts or the location of a key terrorist leader, or disrupts terrorism financing. The majority of reward offers are up to $5 million; however, all reward payments are made at the sole discretion of the Secretary of State.

Since its inception, Rewards for Justice has paid millions of dollars for information that has brought terrorists to justice or prevented acts of international terrorism worldwide.

Rewards for Justice works closely with U.S. embassies and consulates around the world, other U.S. government agencies, and foreign governments to ensure that our reward offers receive wide dissemination.

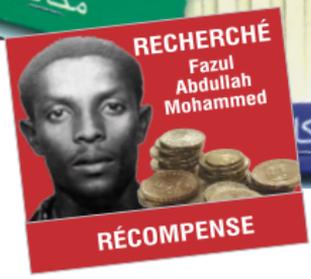

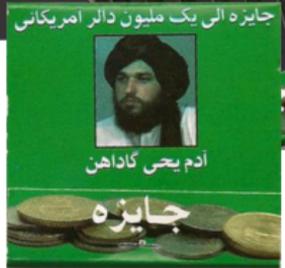

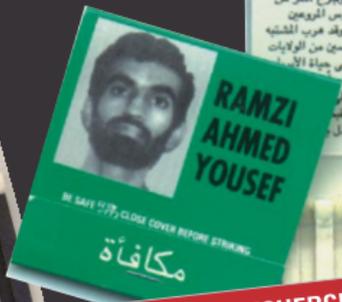

In addition to paid newspaper, radio, and TV ads in the international media, Rewards for Justice uses billboards, flyers, leaflets, matchbooks, and posters to publicize reward offers. The program also posts reward offers on the internet — www.rewardsforjustice.net — and constantly seeks new and innovative ways to promote its efforts.

REWARD PROCES

When a person provides information that prevents or favorably resolves an act of international terrorism against U.S. persons or property, a U.S. Government agency may nominate that person for a reward payment.

STOP THE FLOW OF BLOOD MONEY!

International terrorism is financed by money sent to terrorists from sources around the world. To avoid future incidents, the U.S. Government is offering a reward of up to $5 million for information leading to the dismantling of any system used to finance a terrorist organization and information leading to the arrest or conviction of those who planned or aided in any act of terrorism against U.S. persons or property.

If you have any information about individuals or organizations that finance terrorists, please call 1-800-877-3927 in the U.S.; outside the U.S. contact the nearest U.S. embassy or consulate.

The U.S. Ambassador to the Philippines presides over a reward payment ceremony. Rewards for Justice has paid more than $11 million in the Philippines.

An interagency rewards committee evaluates the information provided and recommends to the Secretary of State whether a reward should be paid, and if so, its amount. The committee is chaired by a Department of State official and includes representatives from the Departments of Defense, Homeland Security, Justice, and Treasury, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency, and the National Security Council.

The recommendation on the amount of the reward payment is based on a number of factors, including the credibility, specificity, and value of the information provided, the seriousness of the danger to U.S. persons or property, the risk faced by the informant and his/her family, and the degree of the informant's cooperation with relevant authorities.

All rewards are ultimately at the discretion of the Secretary of State. The Attorney General also must concur with the decision to pay a reward in any case where federal jurisdiction exists.

Rewards can be paid in a variety of ways — check, wire transfer, and cash. Non-monetary reward payments are also available.

TH
On August 7, 1998, over 200 people were killed by terrorist bombings of U.S. embassies in Nairobi, Kenya and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. These terrorist attacks wounded thousands of people even as they caused billions of dollars in damage. Civilized people everywhere are shocked and outraged by this violence. No one should be wondering when the United States will take action.
