MARITIME BOUNDARIES OF THE WORLD

FIRST REVISION

This paper is one of a series issued by the Office of Ocean Affairs, Bureau of Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs in the Department of State. The aim of the series is to set forth the basis of national arrangements for the measurement of marine areas by coastal states. It is intended for background use only. This paper does not necessarily represent an official acceptance by the United States Government of the limits claimed.

Corrections or additions to any national claim or requests for additional copies should be addressed to the Office of Ocean Affairs, Room 5801, United States Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520.

INTRODUCTION

This Limits in the Seas study is the first revision of a compilation and classification of the world's maritime boundaries. The texts of the agreements are not presented, but most of the agreements can be found in one of the references cited in the bibliography. This paper consists of six tables and a select bibliography.

A brief explanation follows on methodology and terms. Prior to the mid-1970s, most boundary agreements delimited either the territorial sea or the continental shelf. During the United Nations Third Law of the Sea Conference consensus was reached on the concept of an exclusive economic zone. States subsequently began to negotiate a more comprehensive maritime boundary that separated all maritime jurisdiction permitted under international law. For the purpose of the compilations in this study, boundaries separating exclusive economic zones are counted in the maritime boundary category.

The total number of maritime boundaries cited, both negotiated and potential, represents known boundary agreements of all types- territorial sea, fishing, continental shelf, and maritime- and potential maritime boundary situations seaward to 200 nautical miles. The existing boundary delimitations have resulted either from direct negotiations or from third-party adjudications. Not counted in these lists are territorial sea boundaries created prior to 1925, such as the United States- Canada boundary in the Grand Manan Channel or the Denmark-Sweden boundary resulting from the Grisbadarna case.

In some cases, a boundary has been established by several agreements. India and Sri Lanka, for example, have reached three agreements establishing their maritime boundary, including one tripartite agreement that created a tripoint with the Maldives. In other cases, a single boundary agreement has created more than one boundary. The agreement between France and Venezuela, for example, established two maritime boundaries with Venezuela, on the one side, and Guadeloupe and Martinique, on the other side. Another example is the 1976 boundary agreement between the United States and Mexico which created three boundaries to the 200-nautical-mile limit- two in the Gulf of Mexico and one in the Pacific Ocean.

The number for the boundaries not yet negotiated, the "potential" boundaries, is based on drawing hypothetical equidistant lines. Should states decide to use methods other than equidistance, then some of the boundary situations listed in these tables may become irrelevant, and other situations may be created. For example, following the negotiations between the Netherlands and Venezuela in which a non-equidistant line was used in the central Caribbean, a potential Netherlands-United States boundary in the area between Puerto Rico and Aruba, Bonaire, and Curacao no longer existed.

The total number of boundaries will increase significantly should states with existing continental shelf boundary agreements decide to negotiate new maritime boundaries to delimit their respective exclusive economic zones. For example, the Soviet Union has reached agreements with three neighbors- Finland, Poland and Turkey- creating both continental shelf boundaries and then maritime boundaries. With minor adjustments these new maritime boundaries are identical in location to the former continental shelf boundaries.

This study does not address potential boundary situations where the continental shelf extends beyond 200 nautical miles. It should also be noted that since this study was first published two unifications have occurred. Yemen (Aden) and Yemen (Sanaa) unified on May 22, 1990, and the German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany unified on October 3, 1990. It is unclear at this point in time how these states will treat their previously negotiated boundaries. Thus, for the listings contained in this revision, the above states are treated as separate entities.

THE TABLES

Table 1 presents a summary of maritime boundaries, by region, based on information available as of November 30, 1990. The information available indicates that 154 boundary agreements have been reached- 36.7 percent of the 420 total number of boundaries. Of these, 70, or about 45 percent, establish comprehensive maritime boundaries, including exclusive economic zone boundaries; 59, or another 38 percent, create continental shelf boundaries, or continental shelf and fisheries boundaries; 23, or 15 percent, are territorial sea boundaries; and 2 agreements establish fishing boundaries.

Table 2 lists, by region, those delimitations that either have been signed or have entered into force. The marine regions used in tables 1 and 2 have been arbitrarily selected. Table 3 lists the boundary agreements/adjudications by type: maritime, continental shelf/fishing, continental shelf, territorial sea, and fishing. Table 4 lists maritime boundaries (here the term "maritime" is used generically) by country, including those agreements that have entered into force, those that have been signed but not yet in force, and potential boundary situations. Table 5 gives a chronology of the boundary agreements, by date of signature. And, Table 6 lists those states which have established some form of joint arrangement.

A selected bibliography is given. Unfortunately, most of the Limits in the Seas studies listed are out of print. Scholars interested in consulting any of these studies should contact a major marine institute which is likely to have been on the mailing list to receive these studies. Examples of institutes receiving the Limits in the Seas include the United Nations Office of Ocean Affairs and Law of the Sea in New York City and the Center for Ocean Law and Policy at the University of Virginia School of Law. Pleadings of parties in some of the maritime boundary cases before the World Court, in particular the Tunisia-Libya case and the United States-Canada case, include extensive state practice studies. Finally, it should be noted that the American Society of International Law is nearing completion of a major study on all negotiated maritime boundary agreements, the results of which should be published in 1991.

MARITIME BOUNDARIES BY REGION

The following maritime boundary agreements, or adjudications, are in force unless followed by an asterisk (*) indicating that the agreement has been signed only. Unless otherwise indicated the delimitation creates a maritime boundary separating all applicable maritime jurisdiction permitted under international law, including the territorial sea, fishing, continental shelf, and other rights permitted in the exclusive economic zone. Boundaries separating other specific types of jurisdiction are noted as follows: TS= territorial sea; CZ= contiguous zone; CS= continental shelf; F= fishing zone.

The date that the agreement or adjudication entered into force, or was signed, is in parenthesis.

TABLE 4
MARITIME BOUNDARIES
BY COUNTRY

The following list provides information on both resolved (either by negotiation or by adjudication) and potential maritime boundaries of the world's coastal states. One asterisk (*) indicates a boundary agreement has been signed only; two asterisks () signifies the agreement is in force. Date of signature or date agreement entered into force is given in parenthesis.

Unless otherwise indicated, the cited agreement creates a boundary that separates all applicable maritime jurisdiction permitted under international law, including the territorial sea, fishing, continental shelf, and any other rights permitted in the exclusive economic zone. Agreements separating other specific types of sovereignty or jurisdiction are noted as follows: TS= territorial sea; CZ= contiguous zone; CS= continental shelf; F= fishing zone.

TABLE 6JOINT ARRANGEMENTS

The following states have established some form of joint arrangement either in their boundary area or in lieu of delimiting a boundary. Some of these arrangements have been incorporated in boundary agreements, others have been created by separate agreements. The arrangements vary greatly in substance, from creating various types of joint resource development zones (i.e., Japan-Korea, Rep. of) to a general joint scientific zone (Colombia-Dominican Republic), to common fishing grounds (Argentina-Uruguay), to protection zones (Australia-Papua New Guinea).

1. Argentina - Uruguay
2. Australia - Indonesia
3. Australia - Papua New Guinea
4. Bahrain - Saudi Arabia
5. Colombia - Dominican Republic
6. France - Spain
7. Iceland - Norway
8. Japan - Korea, Republic of
9. Kuwait - Saudi Arabia
10. Malaysia - Thailand
11. Norway - United Kingdom
12. Qatar - U.A.E. (Abu Dhabi)
13. Saudi Arabia - Sudan
