

EAP School State of Play

- Enrollment and demographic shifts are in play as schools face the reality of fewer short-term ex-pats.
- Uncertainty looms making the need for skilled and informed governance paramount.
- Programs for English as an Additional Language (EAL) and learning support students are as relevant and needed as ever.
- University applications shifting away from the US to English language degree programs across the globe outside the US.
- Local compliance and regulatory environments increasing the risks and complexity of running and working in international schools.
- The importance of international schools as front-line globalization institutions becoming increasingly apparent.
